Lounge collection includes sled base

Integra Seating announced during NeoCon that it is adding to its Coffee House Collection and Kallise Lounge Collection.

Both collections now feature a solid steel sled base option available in five powder coat colors, the company said. Seven new hardwood maple finishes for all leg and arm options for both collections also are available.

For the Coffee House collection, the new sled base is available on both standard and high back seat models. The sled base joins the collection's existing leg options of brushed aluminum, wood, casters or Integra's innovative Hide&Go Concealed Mobility with a recessed pull handle option.

All Kallise chairs, settees and sofas are now available with the sled base option.

"We feel it is vital to listen to our customers about what is needed in the marketplace today," said Chandra Putnam, Integra Seating's Director of Sales and Marketing. "The addition of these new options gives designers and end-users even more choices for selecting the right seating solution for their project."

Both collections have replaceable or recoverable components, feature dymetrol suspension and have a lifetime warranty.
