>Integra Seating won the 2025 Gold Nightingale Award in the Seating: Guest/Lounge category for its Odyssey Collection. The 2025 Nightingale Awards were presented by Healthcare Design magazine during the Healthcare Design Conference + Expo held last month in Kansas City. Developed specifically for high-performance commercial settings, the Odyssey collection combines design sophistication with unmatched strength and serviceability. The collection was engineered to withstand a 1,200-pound static load and features a continuous wrap-around design, arms, an integrated back pull handle capped with solid surface, and easily replaceable upholstery covers. These elements extend the product's lifecycle while supporting cleanability and long-term value. Award jurors praised Odyssey for its aesthetics, functionality, sustainable attributes, and component-based design, which Integra is known for. "The pull handle on the back being distanced from the cloth was aesthetically contiguous while useful," one juror noted. "The ability to replace the covers is a compelling solution for the future of these pieces." Chandra Putnam, President of Integra Seating, said, "We are honored to receive the Gold Nightingale Award. With Odyssey, our goal was to create seating that delivers performance, longevity, and comfort without compromising on exceptional design. This recognition affirms our belief that healthcare environments embrace and deserve furniture that is as thoughtfully designed, resilient, and supportive as the people who rely on it." >Tangram Interiors launched Falkbuilt DFW by Tangram.

Currently operating out of Tangram's Dallas showroom at 300 S. Pearl Expy, Suite 200, the team is already collaborating with partners across healthcare, corporate, and education markets. Their permanent home, a stunning new space at 301 Southwestern Blvd in Coppell, is slated for a grand opening in Q1 2026. Known for reimagining how spaces are designed and built, Tangram has long partnered with Falkbuilt, a global leader in innovating construction methodology. Falkbuilt offers a full-solution offsite approach that follows the same process as conventional construction, but along the way creates less waste and shrinks schedules. Using a method called digital component construction, they leverage technology, construction expertise, state-of-the-art manufacturing processes, and unwavering customer focus to create solutions that meet every project's needs. Falkbuilt's process combines digital precision with real-world craftsmanship, allowing walls, millwork, and complete interiors to be manufactured with incredible speed and installed with minimal disruption. The new Dallas branch marks a bold expansion of that partnership, pairing Falkbuilt's revolutionary technology with Tangram's deep design expertise, regional infrastructure, and decades of client trust. With a brand-new showroom in downtown Dallas and a state-of-the-art warehouse serving the DFW metro, Tangram is setting a new standard for construction efficiency, precision, and sustainability. Together with four additional showrooms across the West Coast, this move gives Tangram the reach and resources to support Falkbuilt projects from California to Texas and beyond.
